THE TRIPLE MURDER CASE.

Developments That Show That Regers May Have Had a Confederate. MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 3.—Develop-ents in the last few hours in the famous Olney-Ingerick triple murder case incline the authorities to believe that Charles M.

the authorities to believe that Charles M. Rogers had a confederate. For three days hundreds of people have been searching at the scene of the crime for the pocket-book and checks which Rogers said he had hidden in a stone wall. Rogers himself cointed out the spot where he placed the pocketbook, but it could not be found.

The search had practically been given up when to-day George F. Richards of this city visited the scene out of curiosity and found the pocketbook, a check for made out to Fred R. Olney and some other papers belonging to the Olneys lying in plain view on the ground where the searchers had been hunting for three cays. The papers cid not show signs of having been exposed to the elements for ninetees months, and the inference is that some one, probably Rogers's confederate, placed them where they wate found after the assaying party had fair.

Clarence E. Duniap, proprietor of the Eagle Hotel, says he believes Rogers intended to murder and rob him just before the Olney murders were commisted. Rogers was in Dunlap's cafe early in the evening and disappeared. When Dunlap closed up at midnight he heard a noise in the cellar and found Rogers hiding there. Dunlap was armed and quickly ordered Rogers out. Rogers will be arraigned at a special term of the Supreme Court at Goshen on Saturday.
